Melting, or fusion, is a physical process that results in the phase transition of a substance from a solid to a liquid. This occurs when the internal energy of the solid increases, typically by the application of heat or pressure, which increases the substance's temperature to the melting point. At the melting point, the ordering of ions or molecules in the solid breaks down to a less ordered ...

The melting point (or, rarely, liquefaction point) of a substance is the temperature at which it changes state from solid to liquid. At the melting point the solid and liquid phase exist in equilibrium. The melting point of a substance depends on pressure and is usually specified at a standard pressure such as 1 atmosphere or 100 kPa.. When considered as the temperature of the reverse change ...

Urea . Urea, or carbamide, is an organic compound with the chemical formula (NH₂)₂CO that is synthesized from natural gas, not urine as frequently misstated. The molecule has two amine (-NH₂) residues joined by a carbonyl (-CO-) functional group. Urea is the 14 th highest volume chemical produced in the US. The primary use for urea is as a macronutrient ingredient in fertilizers where it ...
