The movement is from a dominant closed order (prototypes 1 and 2), which contains elements of a more open, neo-baroque, to a dominant neo-baroque order, which contains elements of the classical. The initiating impulse of a more consistently neo-baroque open form is found in the third prototype that Calabrese suggests is marked by Bonanza (1959-1973), especially as it developed in the late 1960s and early 1970s.
